Antonia Campi — Penta Collection

Disegnata da Antonia Campi negli anni Sessanta, la collezione Penta è un’espressione di stile senza tempo, in cui rigore geometrico e sensibilità scultorea si incontrano armoniosamente. Il suo segno distintivo sono le manopole con le caratteristiche sfaccettature dalla forma pentagonale, inusuali e fortemente espressive. L’utilizzo di pietre naturali – come marmo bianco, nero o verde – donano unicità, tattilità e un forte valore materico a ogni elemento. Penta è l’espressione di un’epoca di grande fermento creativo: una collezione che racconta la forza innovativa del design italiano del dopoguerra, capace di coniugare artisticità, funzionalità e raffinatezza materica in un linguaggio ancora oggi attuale.

Designed by Antonia Campi in the 1960s, the Penta collection is a timeless expression of style, where geometric rigour meets sculptural sensitivity in perfect harmony. Its defining feature lies in the distinctive pentagon-shaped, faceted handles — unusual and highly expressive. The use of natural stones — such as white, black or green marble — adds uniqueness, tactility and a strong material presence to each element. Penta captures the spirit of a period of intense creative energy: a collection that reflects the innovative force of post-war Italian design, masterfully blending artistry, functionality and refined materiality in a language that remains contemporary today.

Un’amicizia e una stima reciproca: Antonia Campi, pur legata alla storica azienda con cui aveva esordito a Laveno, a fine anni Quaranta/inizio Cinquanta, ha sempre mantenuto viva la sua curiosità per la produzione a lei contemporanea. E non poteva non interessarsi dunque alla rubinetteria fondata nel 1932 da Spartaco Mamoli, ai suoi processi produttivi e ai materiali che vi si utilizzavano. L’archivio cartaceo testimonia questa non dichiarabile, “velata” collaborazione e soprattutto fonti orali, i vecchi operai, la ricordano a gironzolare e a chiacchierare con Spartaco nella fonderia. Ad osservare i prodotti e a suggerire – siamo a metà del decennio Sessanta –, alcune innovazioni proprio legate ai materiali. E, così, ecco prendere forma (e sostanza), un particolare rubinetto, il Penta, che Campi vuole si caratterizzi per l’utilizzo dell’onice, una pietra “preziosa”, nelle sue diverse, particolari, raffinate varietà di colori e striature, traslucido e luminoso, che conferma gli stilemi del suo linguaggio. Un rubinetto che si affianca a quei manufatti in ottone massiccio, certo resistenti e durevoli, e fin da allora frutto di una puntale ricerca tecnologica ma anche estetica. E Penta si impone per le sue sfaccettature giocose, per quella sua elegante geometrica valenza scultorea che propone di fatto anche una felice grippe per l’impugnatura che già suggerisce una riflessione ergonomica. Probabilmente, anche la “svolta” nella nuova messa in pagina dei manufatti Mamoli, può essere frutto di alcune indicazioni di Antonia Campi: infatti, nel suo articolato curriculum, che la porterà ad essere insignita del prestigioso Compasso d’Oro alla carriera nel 2011 – “riconoscimento che celebra l’eccellenza nel design e onora coloro che hanno lasciato un segno indelebile nel settore” –, ha rivoluzionato dal 1957 l’ambiente bagno. Non solo per la proposta di un ambiente accogliente, per gli innovativi sanitari ben progettati, ma anche per quella rubinetteria che assume un suo preciso, qualificante ruolo e inoltre, in anticipo sui tempi, con particolari proposte/progetti per la loro “mise en scène” nei cataloghi aziendali. – Anty Pansera

A friendship and a mutual respect: although closely linked to the historic company where she began her career in Laveno in the late 1940s/early 1950s, Antonia Campi always nurtured her curiosity for contemporary production. It was inevitable, therefore, that she would be drawn to the tapware company founded in 1932 by Spartaco Mamoli, its manufacturing processes and the materials employed. Archival papers reveal this discreet, ‘veiled’ collaboration, while oral sources – the old factory workers – remember her wandering through the foundry, talking with Spartaco, observing products and suggesting – in the mid-1960s – certain material-related innovations. Thus emerged a distinctive tap, the Penta, which Campi wanted to characterise through the use of onyx, a ‘precious’ stone in its various refined colours and veining, translucent and luminous, embodying the hallmarks of her language. A tap that stood alongside the solid brass pieces, robust and durable, already then the fruit of rigorous technological as well as aesthetic research. And Penta stands out for its playful facets, its elegant geometric sculptural quality, which also provides a delightful grip – already suggesting ergonomic reflection. Probably, even Mamoli’s ‘turning point’ in the new presentation of its products may have stemmed from some of Antonia Campi’s indications: indeed, in her rich career, which led to her being awarded the prestigious Compasso d’Oro for Lifetime Achievement in 2011 – ‘an award celebrating excellence in design and honouring those who have left an indelible mark on the industry’ – she revolutionised the bathroom environment from 1957 onwards. Not only through the proposal of a welcoming setting and innovative, well-designed sanitaryware, but also by giving tapware a precise, defining role, and, ahead of her time, by suggesting new ways of staging them in company catalogues. – Anty Pansera
